HOWE'S PRIZE MEDAL Sewing Machines!!

ELIAS HOWE, JR., THE ORIGINAL INVENTOR of the Sewing Machine was awarded the

First Prize Medal

AT THE

INTERNATIONAL EXHIBITION,

Recently held at London, over 250 kinds of Sewing Machines entered for competition from all parts of the world. This is the greatest triumph of the age, and all who have an opportunity to ascertain their merits are satisfied that they are the most perfect in Mechanism and simplest in construction of any Machine yet produced, being easily understood, not at all liable to get out of repair, and are very durable. They are adapted to all grades of work, and make a perfect

Lock Stitch,

Alike on both sides of the fabric. Every one should see the

I EXPECT TO EXHIBIT COBERG AND HIS FAMILY of Colts at the Oregon State Fair, Oct. at Salem. I challenge the coast to meet or produce a Family, & a well authenticated history of a Family in America, that will surpass them for size, form, style, gait, action, and their adaptation to general use except sporting purposes. I will have a one yearling colt for sale.

Persons wishing to secure the services of COBERG in Northern Oregon for the season of 1866, can do so by sending me one any way to or after Fair.

I deem it unnecessary to give an extended description here, but would invite persons to call and see them. Would say that I have reliable information that where the COBERG stock has been in use in Illinois for 15 years at least, they give satisfaction and bring more in use than any other stock of horses.

Letter from Walla Walla

WALLA WALLA, W. T., Aug 21, 1865.

EDITOR OREGONIAN:

During the past week or ten days our mountain locked city has been all agog—all excitement—all perturbation—by reason of a report which has been hawked about upon Main street by morbid patrons of gossip, (said rumor seems to be predicated upon no responsible authority), that the abandonment of the Military Fort here was in contemplation by "the powers that be." Of course, such an order must originate from a very high military head, and it is to be sincerely hoped that the extinction of the old district of Oregon and the inauguration of the new department of Columbia, will not be signalized by any such wild, ill-timed and injudicious measure as this.

We notice by the Walla Walla Statesman (issue of the 18th inst.) that the editor of that conservative journal earnestly "protest" against the abandonment of the Post. They say that the withdrawal of the troops at this time "would militate against the best interests of both the settlers and Indians," while it "would tend to awaken once more those feelings of revenge which have lain dormant, more on account of fear of the soldiers here, than by reason of any well-meant respect and love for the whites."

We believe their argument on the subject are proper, correct and cogent. If we mistake not, the late General Wright favored the continuance at Fort Walla Walla of a large military force; he was partial to the cavalry arm, that they might be expeditiously moved into the field upon the occasion of trouble with our benighted foes. General Wright has gone to his rest in heaven, we trust; for the temper of the times, it is a pity, indeed, that the country should be deprived of his services. He was what we don't meet every day—a perfect gentleman—an officer of broad liberal views—understood life and human nature in all its phases; he acted from higher motives than the mere gratification of personal ambition; and there are scores of young officers in the service who would be wise in following his example. The members of General Wright's family who survive, have the unfeigned sympathies of this community for their sad bereavement, where their kind and honored father was well known and appreciated. Hundreds mingle their tears at his untoward death, and would feign cast a green sprig over his grave. The removal from earth of such an one, reminds us that our stay here is at best, uncertain, and that after all, it is "God who curseth our ills and saveth our lives from destruction." It cannot fail to admonish us, too, that

> "Life is short and time is fleeting,
> And our hearts, though stout and brave,
> Still like muffled drums are beating,
> Funeral marches to the grave."

MEDICAL CHANGE.

Surgeon C. M. Steinberger, (brother of the Colonel), of the First W. T. Infantry Volunteers, in pursuance of orders from Vancouver, left on the 16th inst. for that place. The Doctor has been on duty here since November, 1853, and is an universal favorite with our people. By his surgical tact and skill, he has built up for himself in this valley a professional reputation.

FROM LAPWAI.

Captain Matthews, of the Oregon Cavalry, with his company, is daily [illegible] down from Fort Lapwai. First Lieutenant Samuel F. Kerns, Company D, Oregon Infantry, is the present commandant of the post. The Lieutenant "wears his laurels" without the [illegible] of any [illegible] "frills" and "extras"—which is really refreshing to behold in these days of "shoddy," &c.

FARMING.

The farmers this week are industriously engaged in threshing their wheat, oats and barley stocks. The corn crops look auspicious and promise an abundant yield.

CHURCH CONSECRATED.

The Catholic Church, located in the west section of the city, being completed in all its appartments, was on Sabbath morning last dedicated to the service of Almighty God. The formula usual on such occasions were conducted by the Rev. Fathers Halde and Delahunty. After the ceremonies of the consecrating the church, etc., were concluded, Father Delahunty pronounced a most able, eloquent and effective discourse appropriate to the occasion, basing his remarks upon the twenty-first chapter of the Apocalypse. He reviewed the whole history, struggles, etc., of the Catholic Church during the past eighteen centuries, and concluded by an earnest exhortation to Catholics to adhere to the principles and practices of their faith maintaining that the city mentioned by St. John was the church itself. The attendance was quite large and devout. Father Halde has received letters from Rev. Father Brouillet, who left here some sixteen months ago for Washington City, to care for matters pertaining to the interests of the church. Father Brouillet cannot set any time when he will leave for this Territory.

The studies of "St. Vincent's Academy," under the presidency of the Sisters, were resumed on Tuesday morning last, August 15th, some thirty pupils making their attendance. The Academy of "St. Joseph," for the education of boys, is also in a highly prosperous condition. These schools are doing a vast amount of good in our valley and are justly appreciated by the community.

FROM FORT BENTON.

We conversed to-day with intelligent parties from Fort Benton, upper Missouri river, July 25th. They report that a large number of passengers came up from St. Louis and made home in Montana Territory, while many have found positions in this valley. Quite a number, with families, would have come through with teams, had the Mullan Road been free from fallen timber. These St. Louis "chaps" remark, (to use the precise words of one of them,) "'Tis passing strange that the business men of Walla Walla haven't enterprise enough to clean the timber out of that road—why, an awful amount of hard work has been done on it by that man Mullan, whoever he is." We swallowed the "fling" at the public spirit of our citizens as best we could, and answered our western friends that we would attend to matters in that quarter next year.

REBUILDING.

Main street is beginning to loom up and assume her appearance as in days of yore, nearly all the ground burnt over by the fire on the night of August 2d, is occupied by buildings in course of completion. The subjoined is a list of some of the principal buildings going up: G. Joseph's City Hotel, (two stories,) 30 by 60; C. Jacobs & Co., store, 22 by 40; H. Sanderson's restaurant, 30 by 40, Wm. J. Terry, saloon, 20 by 30, Dan Welch, saloon, (two stories,) 22 by 50, and 24 feet high, Kohlhauff & Guichard's store, 20 by 50, J. Bauer, cigar and general variety store, 18 by 32. James Conlon, blacksmith shop, C. Wincoet, wagon shop, F. Stine, blacksmith shop, 20 by 50, Revenaugh, blacksmith shop, Charles Kraft's temporary livery stable, &c., &c.

CITY ORDINANCE.

A city ordinance was approved by S. G. Rees, Esq., President of Common Council and Mayor pro tem, August 9th, directing all owners of property or lots fronting on Main street to build a sidewalk in front of their respective lots or fractions of lots, etc.; in case of neglect to do this, the city Marshal is empowered to cause such sidewalk to be built, and the property of the owner to be holden to pay expenses.

P. S.—Since penning the foregoing items Capt. W. J. Matthews and First Lieut. R. B. Hammer have arrived at Fort Walla Walla from Fort Lapwai, which post they left on the 14th instant, with eighteen men of Company F, Oregon cavalry. The men are to be transferred to Company A same regiment. Lieut. Hammer leaves (this) Monday morning for Fort Vancouver to be mustered out of service—the cavalry regiment being consolidated into three or four companies. Capt. Matthews took command of the Post to-day. We learn that a petition, numerously signed, has been sent to the proper military department, respectfully representing the injurious consequences which would flow from the withdrawal of troops from Fort Walla Walla, and the abandonment of the place. We bespeak for this memorial the consideration it deserves.

His Honor, Mayor Thomas, returned to-day from a flying trip below, looking as plethoric and hearty as ever after his jaunt.

Yours, etc., ALPHA.

Cruelty to Union Prisoners—Proofs from Rebel Sources

N[illegible] impossible con[illegible] of what has been witnessed and [illegible] weight to the proofs [illegible] during the past two years of the cruel treatment of Union prisoners in the hands of the rebels of the South. Thousands who experienced these sufferings and horrors are still alive to bear witness to what transpired while they and their comrades were in those loathsome dungeons and at [illegible], the mortality of each of which was infinitely greater and more dreadful than that of any vast and untended lazar house. When thousands of living witnesses tell what they have seen and what they have suffered, they cannot be disbelieved. Still more eloquently than these living witnesses speaks the innumerable throng of the noble dead. When we are assured by an indisputable array of figures, when we actually know by the number of men who fell into the hands of their rebel enemies and never returned from their captivity, that about seventy thousand of our soldiers perished in the prison pens of the South, it would be idle to suppose that the insurgents did not institute and carry out a studied and systematic plan of cruelty towards those who fell into their power. Conclusive as these proofs are, we do not have to rely on them alone. We have corroborative evidence from the rebels themselves. We will not stop at this time to cite the testimony of single individuals, but will notice a few things which the Committee appointed by the rebel Congress to investigate those matters, say, in their report which came to light a short time ago.

This report was never published by the rebel authorities. The perpetrators and excusers of those inhuman atrocities did not dare to let the report of their committee appear before the world, notwithstanding the statements it contains are as favorable to the rebels as any that could possibly be made. The object of the committee was to make out a case for the Confederacy. Though they did their best to conceal the terrible facts which even a partial investigation of the matter brought to light, they succeeded so poorly in the attempt that it was found necessary to suppress the evidence they collected in order that the rebels might not be the heralds of their own infamy and cruelty. The report was discovered amid the wreck and ruin in which the Confederacy went down, and is now in [illegible] of the Government.

Many of the most eminent physicians of the United States examined the wasted forms of great numbers of our soldiers who were exchanged and sent North. The numerous photographs of these released prisoners, which were circulated some time ago, have made us all familiar with the macerated appearance they bore. These physicians testified that the men were not reduced by disease, but by starvation. Want of food, and that only, had brought them to the lowest degree of emaciation. The rebel committee does not attempt to meet and confute these facts. They say only that these soldiers were sick men. If we should grant the truth of this assertion, how would they reply to the charges of systematic starvation in hundreds and thousands of other cases where the victims were almost, and in many instances quite as far reduced by hunger as were those few to whom particular reference was made? All who had been in the rebel prisons for any considerable length of time, came out more or less wasted by exposure and starvation.

For a long time it was declared that the Libby Prison had never been mined. In this report of the rebel committee, the mining of the prison is admitted. They justify this act by saying that it was necessary in order to prevent outlaws, as they called our prisoners, from being let loose upon the city, in case an attempt should be made to release them. It would be impossible to conceive a more horrible instance of confessed infamy and depravity than this. We should no longer hesitate to believe that the miscreants who did this are capable of committing any crime which a devilish ingenuity could invent or suggest.

Among our captured soldiers, it was a constant complaint that the rebels robbed them of their clothing, blankets, money, and whatever else they possessed. This charge, as well as the others we have named, was made in the published report of the Sanitary Commission. The rebel committee give it a [illegible] denial and pass it by without any attempt to disprove it.

Throughout the whole report of the rebel Committee no proofs appear to sustain the assertions they make. Bare denial of the atrocities with which they are charged is usually given, but when the committee are asking for evidence in the matter, they call in such persons as the keeper of the Libby prison, and he testifies that the nest of vermin and abode of [illegible] over which he had control was cleanly kept. They do not investigate the matter at all, and the manner in which it is slurred over, shows that they dared not inquire into and publish the facts or even a small part of them.

The report is quite long, and we have not space to notice it further. The reticence of the rebel committee on some of the subjects which they should have examined, and their confessions of cruelty in other particulars, strengthen the belief, and, if that were possible, give additional assurance to the absolute certainty, that the horrors of the prison pens have not only not been exaggerated, but that the half has never been told.

The Brother Jonathan Disaster Again.—The Oregon State Journal in its last issue takes occasion to say that it deems our strictures upon the conduct of those who ought to have sent relief to the survivors, if any, of the steamer Brother Jonathan, quite too severe. The Journal can scarcely be acquainted with the facts. The statements which we made were given after due deliberation and nothing has since transpired to make this case look different from the appearance it wore then. Every statement we made relative to the delay of the owners of the lost steamer in the matter of sending another vessel to the scene of the wreck was perfectly in accordance with the facts and any one with the proofs now at hand can easily verify them. Later advices than we then had go to confirm the supposition or idea that several persons were surviving for some days on portions of the wreck. If so, it is not unlikely that they could have been saved, had aid been sent them.

Of the unseaworthiness of the steamer, it may be said that she was quite seriously injured by her collision with a vessel in the Columbia river but a few days before and that when she started on her last trip sufficient time had not elapsed to have had her thoroughly repaired. We are fully persuaded that our judgment in the first instance was correct, but for the sake of the owners of the steamer we should be glad to have it shown that we were mistaken.

Why is It?—The Copperhead papers still continue to fulminate against the execution of the assassins of Mr Lincoln. In every instance they find it necessary to declare that they do not do so from any punishment by reason of any sympathy with the murderers. Why do they make this declaration? Where is the need of it, if it be true that they desired the rigorous administration of justice in the case? They put in this disclaimer of sympathy with the assassins because they know that the first, most apparent and only motive which the world can assign for such conduct on their part is a desire on their part to have saved these execrable wretches from the doom they met and deserved.

The Brother Jonathan Disaster

[illegible]

San Francisco, Aug 14, 1865.

Editor Oregonian:

I have just arrived from the scene of the late disaster. I sailed around the scene of the wreck twice, but could see nothing that would indicate the presence of a ship in the bottom of the deep. The weather was fine and the sea smooth. I sounded but could get no bottom at 210 feet. Thirty-three bodies have been picked up, including three women, all having on life preservers. It is supposed that those who had not life preservers [illegible].

[illegible] bodies drove ashore on Friday, the 11th. Most of them were found at Pelican [illegible] the north, though the beach is strewn with large quantities of drift stuff, such as portions of the ship's [illegible] driving ashore [illegible]. Some of the spars were washing on the beach at Crescent City. Several trunks belonging to passengers and a part of the English mails had been picked up. The contents, as I saw them, were in a good state of preservation.

I found my wife's father here. He came up on the Del Norte and has been unsuccessful in his search after the remains of my wife, sister and child. He saw and conversed with most of those who were saved.

The report that the ship was in the act of returning to Crescent City is [illegible]. When she struck the concussion was not great. She soon after settled and went down head foremost.

One of the colored seamen reports that the Captain ordered Patterson to remain by the ship. He replied that his life was as valuable as any one's. A female with a child in her arms caught the tackle fall and slid down for the boat. The boat was shoved off, and the last they saw of her she was struggling in the sea. Patterson reports that there were two boats bottom up and if the passengers had seen fit they might have righted and launched them. It was quite rough at the time and from one of the women who was saved we learn that most of the passengers were below, more particularly the women and children, being seasick. The fact of the bodies of females that have been picked up being in their night dresses confirm this statement. It is the opinion of parties here that the upper works have washed off but the ship's hull remains unbroken.

The citizens of Crescent City are exerting themselves to facilitate the recovery of the bodies and property. They think that others might have been saved if the crew had accompanied them out to the wreck immediately after it occurred. They exhibited perfect indifference as to the fate of their comrades and endeavored to dissuade any from going to their rescue. Yours, &c.,

N. C. BROOKS

Curiosities of Taxation.—An Eastern paper, noticing the fluctuations in the returns of incomes, states that one man in New York, who had no property to speak of in 1863, returned an income of $94,000 in 1864. One leading merchant in 1864 had an income of $600,000, and the sales of his house amounted to $40,000,000. In 1861 A. T. Stewart's sales were $30,000,000, and his income $300,000. The year previous he returned an income of $1,801,000. The same paper remarks:

The Treasury of the United States has received some assistance in this war, from many a golden bubble, shining in the morning sun but for a moment. Adventurers in pursuit of an heiress, men ambitious of social positions, fast young blades who desire to astonish the world or to affect loans on doubtful securities, have returned large incomes and paid taxes accordingly. The fellow who dealt in lard, and who slipped away to Europe the other day with a half million of other people's property, was taxed for an income of $15,000 in 1863, and for twice as much in 1864, and this was a part of the false foundation on which he built up his credit. Such things are by no means new, but the tax collector brings them before us in a novel form, and people are thereby led to wonder and to moralize.

Gwin Extolled.—The Examiner of San Francisco is wonderfully pleased with that old traitor Gwin, notwithstanding the part he is playing against the "Monroe doctrine." We have always been unable to see how people could be such great sticklers for this famous doctrine and yet in favor of the establishment of Gwin's Dukedom. Speaking of Gwin, the Examiner says:

"An honest man, a broad-minded statesman and a true patriot, California should remember with pride and pleasure that she was once represented by the Hon. W. M. Gwin on the floor of the United States Senate. At a time when that assemblage was composed of giants, and not pigmies, he was the peer of the best of those around him. In his official capacity he accomplished greater and more good, in less time, for California, than any other Senator from any State, ever did before or since his day. All honor to him! His name will live, and his memory be respected, when all his venal and corrupt detractors are rotting in their corrupt and dishonored graves."

Give the Post Office.—Parties are continually writing to us to change the address of their papers without giving the name of the Post Office at which they have been receiving them. Now we cannot afford to spend from one to three days hunting each of these matters up. When subscribers want the address of their papers changed, they must give the name of the Post Office at which they have been receiving them as well as that to which they desire them changed. If Dr H. Shecleston will do this his paper will be sent where he wants it to go.

Jealousy.—M. C. Nichols, in Goshen (Ind.) got married, and in a marvelously brief space of time got jealous of his wife. He left his house in a rage and sent his wife a box including a headless snake and a note telling her that her lover or lovers would find himself or themselves in the condition of the reptile if they persisted in continuing their visits to her house. The poor woman was so horrified at this treatment that she had a nervous attack, and the doctor was sent for. The ferocious husband seeing the Doctor enter his yard, put two balls in his person—one in his abdomen—a ghastly wound—the other in his leg. The doctor, who is pluck to the backbone, then "pitched into" Nichols and gave him a severe mauling. The Courts will now finish the performance. The doctor's wounds are bad but not dangerous.

We learn that Col. Curry has ordered Capt. Lafollett's company to the mouth of Crooked river. They will proceed over the new road from Lebanon via the Three Sisters.

Appointment.—We learn that Dr. J. A. Mullan has been appointed Physician at the post of Walla Walla. He takes the place of Dr. C. M. Steinberger of the 1st W. T. Infantry.

The O. S. N. Company are fitting the new steamer Rescue for the trade, giving the traveling public more ample cabin accommodations and [illegible] dining facilities. This steamer will be put upon the route in about two weeks, and [illegible] to compete with the [illegible] may now say, is getting [illegible] enough service to be [illegible] ancient competitor the Belle [illegible] continue increasing in its present rate [illegible] of boats at least will be necessary. The [illegible] the Cowlitz region, the lumber and agricultural interests of other [illegible] the raising of sheep and the keeping of dairies, to say nothing of the mineral [illegible] points near St. Helens, bode a very promising future for those who are now [illegible] in that direction.

OREGON TIMBER.—People there are, everywhere, [illegible] [illegible] Oregon timber "poor stuff." It isn't good for anyth[illegible] in the estimation of nine tenths of our own population. The other tenth know better. It was hardly [illegible] that enough oak could be found in [illegible] county to put a new one on the Larkentine Jane A. Falkinburg, but Capt. Clinton very readily found a better quality of oak to repair those damages than can be found in the planking of many eastern made ships visiting this port, and there is enough left to build a fleet larger than that of the American navy. To come down [illegible] [illegible] impossible to make suitable beer barrels [illegible] Oregon "stuff," but a test of the matter proves [illegible] important article of barrels can compare with those [illegible] at home. Masons have tested the point to their [illegible] satisfaction, and we need only refer the incredulous [illegible]. To compare the lumber brought to this market [illegible] purposes, from our own mills with the [illegible] article, is sheer nonsense—the latter is not near as [illegible]. The fact is, Oregon timber is about as good [illegible] purpose in which it may be used, as the timber of [illegible] country.

A [illegible] PLACE.—The brick yard of Benj. Thorndlly [illegible] at this time, a deserted looking place. The proprietor was suddenly called to visit Europe, much to the [illegible] of his [illegible] creditors, at the very time when it would have paid him better to pursue an honorable [illegible] at home, and as a consequence his former place [illegible] is a deserted spot. The moulds, carts, &c., [illegible] neglected under a shed; the kiln and yard are covered with a dwarfish growth of grass and weeds; the tanks [illegible] troughs are dried and shriveled in the sun, the wood [illegible] already in heaps as it was thrown through the [illegible] from the forest on the hill top, when all about [illegible] a theatre of active labor. Had Mr. Thorndlly [illegible] made a miscalculation, the present might have [illegible] his most prosperous season. Now, instead of one [illegible] yard, for he pretty nearly monopolized the trade, there are four or five. His is useless, while the others [illegible] handsome revenues to their owners.

[illegible] PEACHES.—A lady in Sacramento was canning [illegible] a few days since when the can exploded, scalding [illegible] and sending the hot peaches to the ceiling of the room. "Honest Wife" in the Bee gives the cause of [illegible], which may not be uninteresting to our [illegible]. She says it was owing to an accumulation [illegible] bottom of the can. It is a very common [illegible] as all housewives know, for the contents of a [illegible] be forced to the top of the vessel when [illegible] is thrust to the bottom, the steam [illegible] subsides to its proper level, and an ex[illegible] When the contents of the cans get in [illegible] "Housekeeper" advises the cook [illegible] for her eyes, and to be cautious in [illegible] cans, and by no means to expose the [illegible] over them.

[illegible]—We are informed by telegraph that Mayor [illegible] of San Francisco, is taking precautionary measures [illegible] the introduction of the plague at that city, on [illegible] of the vessels. Here the authorities might [illegible] interfere to prevent a plague in [illegible]. The filthy habits of the Chinese in this city [illegible] to make this the headquarters of a [illegible]. The place most likely for it to break out is [illegible] Alder and Yamhill streets. Main [illegible] a most nauseous condition at this time [illegible] directed to the attention of [illegible] health. A petition—if petitions are [illegible]—should forthwith be presented to [illegible] the subject. There is now a great deal [illegible] on account of this filth. Remove [illegible] death will remove the balance of population.

[illegible].—It is said that a man named Brown [illegible] at San Francisco, was preserved [illegible] on the Jonathan very likely by being [illegible] before the steamer left. Jimmy [illegible] saved, by being in jail at the [illegible] left. There are always a number of [illegible] to record in times of great calamities [illegible] of the Brother Jonathan. Occurrence [illegible] nature, than any recorded was related [illegible] barber shop in Portland. The person re[illegible] said he had run a narrow escape [illegible] the Jonathan by being lucky enough [illegible] about two months prior to the event [illegible] these cases to show the bearing of fate in [illegible]. John Brown would never have [illegible] to go down on the ill-fated steam ship.

[illegible] GARDENS.—Mr. Hummel, the owner of a [illegible] portion of the [illegible] part of this city near the hills, has [illegible] in sinking for water at the foot of a [illegible], where he designs placing a small reservoir [illegible] by about fourteen feet deep, to supply [illegible] the purposes of irrigation. He has a fair [illegible] to be able to produce water sufficient to [illegible] his own premises, and have [illegible] the hills to the south have springs and [illegible] view of the matter, that an [illegible] may be procured in this manner for [illegible].

[illegible] of the new code provides that [illegible] before the Court at which the [illegible] is bound to [illegible] at any time he [illegible] acknowledge in writing that he has [illegible] for the injury, the Court may, in its [illegible] of the costs and ex[illegible] incurred [illegible] to be stayed, [illegible] Hoffman on Wednesday, [illegible] and James Meehan, both defendants and [illegible], who had complained one against the other [illegible]. They became reconciled, and satisfied [illegible].

[illegible] WHARF.—There has been some recent changes in the [illegible] of steamers. To prevent disappointments [illegible] to see any one left [illegible] food to travel by steamer—we will state that boats run[illegible] regularly to the following and intermediate points [illegible] Monticello, Vancouver and Oregon City [illegible] the foot of Washington street, at the wharf formerly known as the Pioneer wharf. Freight of the first [illegible] City trade is received and discharged at the steamship dock, foot of B street.

HELD TO BAIL.—Dr. Charles H. Br[illegible] of the Dalles was held to answer [illegible] for practicing [illegible] contrary to the laws [illegible] taken out a license for [illegible] for the year 1864 [illegible] $100. Col. [illegible] the prosecution [illegible] imprisonment a [illegible].

THE MONTGOMERY STREET SEWER.—The culvert [illegible] during the water of the hills [illegible] of the city into the river known as the Montgomery street sewer, has been extended [illegible] of Harrison street. The upper end [illegible] before the rainy season to prevent the introduction of trash and dirt likely to choke it up.

WORK SUSPENDED.—We visited the tunnel [illegible] by the Water Company at the foot of [illegible] yesterday. Work has been temporarily suspended [illegible] tunnel [illegible] The tunnel is well timbered up, and has [illegible] water on the floor [illegible] future when the work [illegible].

POLICE MATTERS.—D. Freedman was arrested yesterday on a charge of [illegible] than six miles per hour. Richard Thompson was arrested for being drunk and lying [illegible] Front street. Equally [illegible] committed to jail on a similar charge.

THE NEW SCHOOL HOUSE.—The frame [illegible] enclosed in a few days for the new school house in the Third Ward. It will be a fine structure, quite creditable to that part of the city. A force of workmen are engaged upon it sufficient to have the building ready for use [illegible] of two months.

From St. Domingo

NEW YORK, Aug. [illegible]—The State Department has been informed that Spain having failed in her efforts to subjugate St. Domingo, now demands an acknowledgment that she went there to take possession at the request of the people. The Dominicans refused to make so humiliating an acknowledgment, and her ports have been declared blockaded.

Rumors of an early interview between the King of [illegible] and the people prevailed. The correspondent says it is generally believed such a personal interview will not take place before the evacuation of Rome by the French troops.

NEW YORK, August 11.—The Warsaw Journal announces that the plan for a telegraph line between Russia and America has been approved and signed by the Czar. The Russian Government undertakes to complete the line as far as Nicolaiefski, the remaining part to San Francisco being in charge of an American company. The capital of the latter amounts to $10,000,000 bonds, representing $8,4[illegible],600, have already been issued. It is intended that this route shall be finished in five years.

From Crescent City—More Bodies Found.

JACKSONVILLE, August 24th.—The following is an extract taken from a private letter to the Oregon Sentinel for publication, which gives a statement of all the bodies found near Crescent City from August 17th to 20th.

No. 42.—A white woman, apparently about forty five years old, five feet eight inches high, rather fleshy, light brown hair, long and mixed with some white; had on a dark woolen dress, ribbed, the bottom embroidered with red and black buttons with white set; gold ring, mended on inside with a piece of silver.

No. [illegible].—A white man, from thirty five to forty years old, five feet four inches high, hair worn off head, black goatee, face could not be described, good teeth; had on purple cassimere pants, pegged boots, one half soled; one gold hunting watch with vest chain attached, one gold lady's watch with guard and chain attached, one silver watch, four Brother Jonathan checks for trunks Nos. 5, 31, 81 and 84. Coin in pocket amounting to $10 75c. Had on also a black cassimere vest and white overshirt.

Found four miles below Trinidad the body of Isaac Wail, brother of David Wail of Portland; also a young lady supposed to be Miss N. Shirrer. Found at Gold Bluffs, a white man six feet two inches high, would weigh about 180 pounds; have got no other description.

The supposed killing of a man near Klamath river, who came ashore on a piece of the Brother Jonathan, is untrue.

CRESCENT CITY, Aug. 20.—To the Editor of the Oregon Sentinel: I was witness to the finding of a body of one of the passengers of the Brother Jonathan on the 15th inst., near Chetcoe in Oregon, a few miles above the boundary line. He was a full sized athletic man, with dark red hair, goatee and whiskers under the chin; features large, round and rather heavy. He had on only a knit garnsey shirt, drawers and pants and a life preserver. In his pockets we found a comb, a ten dollar gold piece and two small papers, much worn and torn. We also took from his finger a gold ring, with the device of a double heart and inside of it engraved the name Irwin. One of the papers was an inventory of men's and women's clothing on board the steamer Golden Rule, with the cost of each article, amounting in all to $547 25. The only name on this list was that of Catherine Irwin. The other piece of paper was folded within the first and was torn on the side and bottom; it was perfect on the top and contained the this writing: John B. Ferguson, Southeast corner of Howard and Thompson streets, Philadelphia. The items for which Mr. Ferguson was indebted to John Irwin did not appear, but were torn off. The body with the articles found were left in possession of Mr. A. F. Miller, who lives at the mouth of Chetcoe creek. Mr. Miller would proceed to bury the body as soon a coffin could be made. The steamer Golden Rule, you will remember, was in the Nicaragua line and was lost on the Atlantic side. I have a full copy of the inventory of clothing and I also made a heavy pencil sketch of the features of the deceased which I will send to any relative desiring them. I shall communicate these facts to Mr. J. B. Ferguson, of Philadelphia. Perhaps if they are published in the Oregon papers they may lead to the identification of the person.

Yours very respectfully,

San Francisco News.

SAN FRANCISCO, August 21.—Thomas H. Locke, late clerk of the State Prison, on account of whose defalcations and supposed suicide was recently published, was arrested yesterday afternoon at the Gautier House, where he has been concealed since his flight. From circumstances which have come to light, it seems that Locke must be one of the most confirmed hypocrites and villains that ever lived. When he first confessed his guilt to Governor Machin, he pretended to make a clean breast of everything, and with tears and protestations declared that the statement then made was full and correct in every particular. Subsequently, the forged prison draft came to light, and when questioned about it he acknowledged having forged the endorsement, and it seems there is no end to his rascality, but that he has been carrying them on for a long time at the cost of the State Prison, employees, prisoners, and every one who put any confidence in him.

Many of the friends and relatives of Capt. De Wolf, of the Brother Jonathan, have recognized the man [illegible] last evening's Bulletin, as having been found by Indians and buried by Lieutenant Little, four or five miles off Trinidad, as Capt. De Wolf's, [illegible] beyond a doubt.

A man named Fitzpatrick, an employee of the San Francisco and Alameda Railroad Company, was instantly killed yesterday by falling from the car platform while the train was in motion.

Mr. Thomas Nesbit, brother of the late James Nesbit, who was lost in the Jonathan, has recently [illegible] a letter from a gentleman at Crescent City, informing him that among the papers found on the body of Mr. Nesbit was a will written with a lead pencil, and evidently written after the ship had struck. The will makes his brother sole executor. This is an unusual instance of self-possession and thoughtfulness in the hour of deadly peril.

Shall Disfranchised Rebels Vote in Oregon?

PORTLAND, August [illegible], 1865.

EDITOR OREGONIAN:

I take the following from the Albany Journal, which I shall be pleased to have you publish together with the law on the subject of rebel voting, and I submit that I have the idea [illegible] Journal point out a more effective way of accomplishing the desired object. Yours &c.

The last number of the State Rights publishes a letter from Hon. J. H. D. Henderson, which points out the dangers to be feared from rebels voting in Oregon. Union men everywhere confidently expect some action to be taken by our State authorities to preserve the purity of the ballot box. No man asks for more than this. All that is desirable is that such action may be taken as will effectually prevent the much secesh element from exercising the right of suffrage in Oregon.

AN ACT to prevent those who have been engaged in the rebellion or have aided the rebellion from voting.

Be it enacted by the Legislative Assembly of the State of Oregon as follows:

SECTION 1. That no person shall be entitled to vote at any State or county election in this State who has been directly engaged in the rebellion of the so-called Southern [illegible] of [illegible] by bearing arms, furnishing supplies, or in any other way.

SEC. 2. That whenever at any general [illegible] election in this State any person [illegible] offering to vote [illegible] that he has been [illegible] section [illegible] of this act, the [illegible] administer the following oath: [illegible] [illegible] that I have not [illegible] of the Confederate States [illegible] since [illegible] having been in the service of said rebellion or in any way [illegible] by furnishing the officers of said Confederate States money or their material means of help [illegible], so help me God; and if the party refuse to take said oath his vote shall be rejected.

SEC. 3. The oath prescribed by this [illegible] shall not be required [illegible] citizens of the United States: Provided, however, that nothing in this act shall be so construed as to deprive any person of his rights under the Amnesty Proclamation of President Lincoln, provided this right can be established.

Approved October 21st, 1864.

GEN. SHERMAN ON NEGRO SUFFRAGE.—A synopsis of one of General Sherman's late speeches at Chicago, thus states his views on the negro suffrage question:

Adverting to the negroes, who had been made free, he said that the Government would require to institute some system of labor, in order that the lands of the South might be cultivated. He wanted those who had been in the South to bear testimony to the condition of those freed negroes. His own personal opinion was that they were not fitted for the exercise of the franchise. He wanted them to get a fair price for their labor—to own and cultivate the lands, but he didn't think they were fitted to take part in the legislation of the country.

The General, therefore, sustains the policy of the President against the radicals.

A SALUTARY THOUGHT.—When I was a young man there lived in our neighborhood a farmer, who was usually reported to be a very liberal man and uncommonly upright in his dealings. When he had any of the products of his farm to dispose of he made it an invariable rule to give good measure, rather more than would be required of him. One of his friends observing him frequently doing so, questioned as to why he did it. He told him he gave too much, and it would be to his disadvantage. Now, dear reader, mark the answer of this good man: "God has permitted me but one journey through the world, and when I am gone, I cannot return to rectify mistakes." Think of this, there is but one journey through life.

A QUAKERESS CONSOLES BOWLES.—On Sunday last a Mrs. Hussted, a preacher of the Society of Friends, who resides in Marion county, Indiana, visited the Ohio Penitentiary, and by permission of the warden preached to the inmates. At the conclusion of the services she called upon many of the convicts in their cells and besought them to reform, and condoled with them upon the circumstances that placed them in durance vile. Among others who claimed her attention was Bowles the Indiana conspirator, who received the following bit of consolation: "Friend Bowles, I've known of thy conduct well, and I am glad to see thee here. Our wise rulers placed thee here to answer for thy sins, and I hope they will keep thee here for the term of thy natural life."—Ohio State Journal.

An occasional correspondent of the New York Times writes from London as follows:

It will be a satisfaction to all true friends of honest dealing to know that in a business point of view the London Times has felt the folly of its position on the American question, and the current rumor on the streets is that the "American correspondent," who has done more than any living writer to embitter the relations of the two nations and to spread false views of our affairs, is to be recalled.

Fort Lapwai is at present garrisoned by fifty-six men, under Captain Waters. Rather a small band for effective service should the Nez Perces conclude to "kick up a revolution." There are now only thirty two troops at Walla Walla, and with the general muddled condition of military affairs, the Indians to the northeast could sack the country before troops could be got into position to repel them.—*W. Gettysburg Battle Field Two Years After the Conflict

A [illegible] New York [illegible] was [illegible] Gettysburg [illegible] the [illegible] the field in the last [illegible] [illegible]

[illegible] the fusilade of artillery, which [illegible] [illegible] to infantry assault upon [illegible] was simply the agony through which the [illegible] [illegible] our men was hoped for.

The right of the line, held by Slocum, still presents the most visible evidences of the conflict. The breastworks still remain, though in a crumbling [illegible] [illegible] the avarice of the owner of the ground has induced him to [illegible] the [illegible] of the battle for the sake of selling the timber put [illegible] by the soldiers for the [illegible] of their lives. [illegible] hill, so well defended [illegible] [illegible] by the forest of oaks and [illegible] with [illegible] marred by [illegible] and slowly [illegible] [illegible] the rebel [illegible] [illegible] over [illegible] in the ground, and now scarce a piece [illegible] [illegible] discovered. It is only when a [illegible] battered bullets that [illegible] the battle can be found on the ground. In front of where Slocum fought, down in that dark and dense ravine, out of which up the steep hill sides Ewell's men charged with diabolical [illegible], only to be hurled back into death, are the most visible evidences of the battle anywhere to be seen. The trees in front of [illegible] are dead and dying; the terrible musketry has girdled them with bullets, and they stand [illegible] and dismal monuments of the [illegible]. Many are cut in two, their tops overhanging and interlacing with the dead underbrush beneath; others are splintered, but the sap from the roots has passed to the branches, and nurtures a feeble verdure which cannot long survive. Reopened graves on the easterly slope of the hill mark where our gallant [illegible] were first buried, now exhumed and [illegible] with honor in the nation's cemetery. Down in the ravine where the rebel line of battle [illegible] are [illegible] grass grown, unmarked and untouched, where the enemy's dead were buried, a trench their sepulchre, an army blanket their winding sheet, and the sighing of the forest breezes their only requiem. To the left of this point is the little hill where Wadsworth's line was formed, extending by a sharp angle to the extreme prolongation of Cemetery Hill, against which the "Louisiana Tigers" made such a disastrous charge on the evening of the second day. Right at this point are the lunettes and traverses which protected our guns, still preserved, the most accessible vestiges of the field, for they are in plain view from the roadside. Crossing the Baltimore turnpike, we follow our line through the Evergreen Cemetery, the point from which is obtained the most extensive view of the field. The wreck produced among those evidences of posthumous honor have been repaired, and there is little evidence of the artillery fire whose thunders must have shaken even the bones of the dead. Here and there a gap in the handsome iron fences show where shell or solid shot forced their resistless way, but the white tombstones and chaste monuments reveal nothing but the solemn quiet of the grave. Right in front, as you face the village on the westerly slopes of the hill, is the National Cemetery, irregular, oblong and yet sextagonal in shape. Part of the apple orchard where I watched the play of the skirmishers through those long hours which preceded the assault of the second day has been cut away and is now included in the cemetery. The houses occupied by the sharpshooters, perforated and battered by the bullets, still stand and are occupied by those who boast of their prowess as they point out the evidences of the battle. The house where Jenny Wade was killed, now perpetuated in song and story, is pointed out with peculiar interest. Turning to the left, at an inn which naturally takes to itself the title of "Battle field Hotel," we pass into the Tarrytown road, rough and rocky as when I galloped over it two years ago. The line held by Newton and Doubleday is passed, but not an indication of the struggle is to be seen. I pick out the very spot where Newton's headquarters ambulance stood, where our frugal lunch was made ere the battle began. Passing still further down the road, we alight at the primitive cottage known as "Gen. Meade's Headquarters," surprised to find that there is a board or shingle left. There is not on the line a point of greater interest. Situated within a stone's throw of our line of battle on the left, subjected to a converging fire of artillery, I remember most vividly the scenes of Thursday and Friday, July 2 and 3, 1863. Headquarters were never so thoroughly and completely "under fire." A perfect simoom of shot and shell came screeching over the line and raking this miserable little dwelling; a score of staff horses tied to the very fence which now incloses the humble garden were killed outright, two or three Staff officers wounded, and a hundred narrow escapes, every body hugging the ground and wishing themselves as thin as wafers; a thundering, screeching, tearing shower of shells, plunging and bursting everywhere, it seemed impossible that anything should live through such a feu d'enfer. But the cottage stands. It looks not a bit older—a mark of rude treatment only here and there, the fences as they were; the well, which was the only hospitality of the place, the single apple tree, bearing now a few specimens of red harvest apples, one of which we pick as a memento—while the poor German widow traffics in relics from the field, and bemoans to visitors the destruction wrought upon her household effects.

It is significant that that part of the field where the battle was fiercest, because our line was weakest, should show least traces of the conflict. Our line here runs along a little crest, and at one point for some distance is entirely level. This is the ground held and fought by Hancock and Sickles. Here our troops had but little protection, rail fences thrown into low piles, not high enough to shield a line of men prone upon the earth. But our muskets and our terrible "brass twelves" had magnificent range; a mile beyond the rebel line issued from the woods on Friday the flower of the rebel army, led by Pickett, Garnett, Armistead and Kemper; on they came in splendid order, three lines deep, not a tree, scarce a shrub to impede the vision. History tells how they were received, how that broad and level plain was piled with hecatombs of their dead, how more than half of that army were killed and captured, how the gallant Hancock lay upon the green sward weltering in the blood of his own wound, but still directing the successful movements of battle. Garnett and Armistead killed, Kemper wounded and captured, the command of Pickett shattered, [illegible] hopelessly the day lost, and the enemy finally defeated. Pastures and harvest fields now leave no trace of that bloody work. It is only the experienced eye that can place our line where we held it so steadfastly two years ago; our own dead have been removed and lie in the cemetery, but [illegible] [illegible] which the poor Southrons were buried [illegible] plow [illegible] luxuriant grain springs from the earth, and their resting place is all but obliterated. Occasionally a mound in the roadside is visible, and is pointed out as the grave of a rebel, and at one point a rude fence inclosing barely the six feet of earth accorded to human clay marks the spot where a rebel officer, bearing upon his person the evidence of membership in the Masonic Order, received formal burial at the hands of [illegible] brotherhood whose secret bonds [illegible] and [illegible] and recognized him as a brother.

Passing to the extreme left of the line we dismount and climb the rocky sides of Little Round Top. The view from this point around to the centre is superb, the position of both armies is clearly visible. The evidences of the battle are numerous, though from the rough nature of the ground it is quite a close observation to detect them. The rough stone defenses thrown up by [illegible] still stand; the rocks that shielded the marksmen [illegible] their face been altered with the marks of the leaden rain; here is where [illegible] and Sickles fought on the second day, where [illegible] Weed and Hazlett were killed, where [illegible] fell; an enduring rock marked with the name of the hour; still further to the left and [illegible] Round Top, is the spot where the desperate struggle took place upon our extreme left flank, where the late lamented [illegible] [illegible] through Gettysburg to [illegible] [illegible] back the rebels with his gallant [illegible] that [illegible] of the Twentieth Maine holding the extreme flank, and finally pushing [illegible] back [illegible] gained Round Top itself, which was subsequently secured by the arrival of six regiments of Reserves. In front of this is the little valley rendered [illegible] by a stagnant brook, the [illegible] [illegible], a remarkable upheaval of enormous rocks, forming a cavern a hundred feet long and [illegible] enough to admit a man; through this runs a trickling stream, and here our wounded [illegible] during the battle for water and safety, only to meet their death by drowning when the rains of the night suddenly swelled this stream to a torrent from which there was no es[illegible] [illegible] was afterward found [illegible] charge [illegible] [illegible] the waters.

[illegible] is sunk and [illegible] a flag staff [illegible] [illegible] banner is still [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] Little Round Top [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] a number of [illegible] the only battle [illegible] North [illegible] [illegible] emphatic [illegible] everybody. The [illegible] were simply [illegible] graceful.

The monument whose corner stone was so [illegible] laid [illegible] will [illegible] before the [illegible] of the present year, and perhaps by another Fourth of July the [illegible] will be complete in all its parts. The gatekeeper's house [illegible] the drives [illegible] and [illegible] the ornamentation of the grounds completed, the whole plan happily carried out. Descriptions of the cemetery have been heretofore given. There are buried here nearly 4,000 soldiers, most of whom are known, and their names, company and [illegible] [illegible] into the granite which [illegible] their [illegible] [illegible] granite blocks rising nine inches above the ground and showing a face or width of ten inches on their upper surface. The designer of the monument is James G. Batterson of Hartford, Connecticut, who furnished the following description:

The design of the Gettysburg monument is adapted for execution either in marble or in granite and bronze, as may be deemed expedient, the material being [illegible] controlled entirely by the amount appropriated. The whole [illegible] of the design is intended to be purely historical, telling its own story with such simplicity that any [illegible] mind will [illegible] comprehend its meaning and purpose.

The superstructure is sixty feet high and consists of a massive pedestal twenty five feet square at the base, and is crowned with a colossal statue representing the Genius of Liberty. Standing upon a three quarter globe, she raises with her right hand the victor's wreath of laurel, while with her left she gathers up the folds of our national flag under which the victory has been won.

Projecting from the angles of the pedestal are four buttresses supporting an equal number of allegorical statues representing respectively War, History, Peace and Plenty.

War is personified by a statue of the American soldier who, resting from the conflict, relates to History the story of the battle which this monument is intended to commemorate.

Peace is symbolized by a statue of the American mechanic, characterized by appropriate accessories.

Plenty is represented by a female figure, with a sheaf of wheat and fruits of the earth typifying peace and abundance as the soldier's crowning triumph.

The panels of the main die between the statues are to have inscribed upon them such inscriptions as may hereafter be determined.

The main die of the pedestal is octagonal and is panelled upon each face. The cornice and plinth above are also octagonal and heavily molded. Upon this plinth rests an octagonal [illegible] bearing upon its face, in high relief, the national arms.

The upper die and cap are circular in form, the die being encircled with stars equal in number with the States whose sons contributed their lives as the price of the victory won at Gettysburg.

It is probable that the statue of Plenty will be substituted by one representing Freedom, typified by the figure of President Lincoln stretching forth his hand containing the Emancipation Proclamation.

The Battle of Waterloo

The battle of Waterloo has been regarded and described as one of the decisive battles of the world. Is that description justifiable? It was certainly natural. Nobody can wonder at the feelings with which the intelligence of this great victory was received at the time and recalled for many a year afterward. Not only was it a fierce stand up fight between rival nations under their most renowned commanders, but in one sense it was really decisive. It terminated the great wars of the French revolution. After Waterloo the land had peace. A generation of wars then came to an end, and a new era of peace and progress commenced. But that is not what we mean by one of the decisive battles of the world. In that sense a decisive battle is a battle which decides some great issue at once and for all, which crushes one cause and sets up another, which turns the stream of history into a fixed and permanent channel, and which stands out as a landmark in such views for all time.

It was a decisive battle in which Charles Martel beat back the Saracens, and saved Europe from their predominance. Marathon and Pharsalia were decisive battles, and we know what became of them. But what came Waterloo? Beyond the forty years peace, secured by the exhaustion of the world, what followed upon the victory of June 18, 1817? We can tell what was thought and believed to follow. We believed all of us that we had rescued Europe from another series of battles which Napoleon would infallibly have brought about. We thought we had put an end to the French Revolution and its principles; that we had restored the dynasty of the Bourbons in France, and extinguished the Empire and the dynasty by which it had been created. How much of all this has come to pass? Did we really turn the stream of French history into its old channel, and obliterate every trace of the new channel in which it had been running? Did Waterloo really decide the issue between the ideas of the Old Monarchy? Did it, in fact, decide anything at all beyond the relative strength of the forces engaged?

We say, without hesitation, that a less decisive battle in the true political sense of the term, was never fought. Instead of stemming and turning a mighty current, it set up nothing but a little little porous dam which was washed away by the stream before a dozen years were out. The treaties which followed have been torn to shreds and more remains of the Thirty Years' War than of the Waterloo campaign. The restored Bourbons were driven out of France again, twice over. The proscribed dynasty came back again and reigns now. A truer picture of France could not be given than by saying that what we now see is the very reflection of what might have been seen, allowing difference of conditions, half a century ago, if we had never fought the battle of Waterloo or had lost it. The present ruler of France is occupied as far as circumstances will admit the principles to which a long and at last bitter experience had guided his ancestor.

Assuming, as for argument's sake we may, that Napoleon in 1815 had really seen the [illegible] of his fierce and unscrupulous career, it would follow that what we fought against then was simply what we regard without objection now. We are not imputing any want of wisdom to the statesmen of those times. They reasoned by their lights, and they could form no other conclusion than they did. They could not be expected to believe in the transfiguration of the restless conqueror into the man of peace. His own countrymen could not believe it. They were as little willing to accept him as we were, and others admit that their incredulity was justifiable. Possibly, [illegible] from the [illegible] of Elba, was not yet entirely the man of St. Helena, but it is at least certain that he was no longer the man [illegible] or Tilsit.

His dreams of European monarchy had been dispelled, his career of conquest was over, and he would have been glad enough to have been left undisturbed. But it was too late, and Waterloo decided that no fresh trial should be allowed him. It decided, however, nothing else. All the historical part of the question had been decided [illegible] in the snows of Russia or the plains of [illegible]. There, if anywhere, was the decisive battle of these wars. At Waterloo the disturber of the world's peace was punished, but that is all. The ideas which he represented survived, the dynasty which he founded rose again, and the ruins [illegible] which his throne had been raised were found beyond our power to reconstruct. Under such circumstances we think the [illegible] Waterloo might as well be [illegible]. The victory was a splendid military achievement, but the policy which the war expressed was no enduring [illegible] successful [illegible]. The battle was a battle which [illegible] [illegible] but it inscribed nothing which [illegible] [illegible] at the pains to commemorate.—London [illegible]

Signs of a Gathering Storm.—The old monarchical establishments of Europe are beginning [illegible] to totter [illegible] shake. There are [illegible] signs of this now visible from England to Austria and the Mediterranean. Among the latest is the revolutionary conspiracy just discovered in Spain for the overthrow of the Bourbons and the union of Spain with Portugal. The leaven of our grand and successful war for the Union and popular rights in various forms is beginning to work in Europe. The confidence of the people in popular rights is revived, and kings and crowns and oligarchs are in danger.

The Amnesty Question.—The rebel General [illegible] has [illegible] himself [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] the amnesty [illegible] as a matter of [illegible] [illegible]. The following extract taken from the Galveston Texas [illegible] will serve to illustrate the change that has taken place in newspaper sentiment in Texas and at the same time present a correct view of the amnesty question:

[illegible] men who are [illegible] to [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] the Constitution has been [illegible] by the sword [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] their [illegible] [illegible] given from [illegible] for the strength and tenacity of their faith [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] the only [illegible] [illegible] be upheld by those who [illegible] stand their theory. * * * *

Yet committed them have the Southern fellow [illegible] [illegible] three hundred thousand lives [illegible] [illegible] millions upon millions in value [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] the most terrible [illegible] of conscription [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] whose only crime was to [illegible] the [illegible] of their fathers [illegible] [illegible] false teachers whose gulf of [illegible] bound to be [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] power.

There is a sad mistake of their [illegible] and their duty. They would themselves [illegible] confess, at least, that the United States is the Government of [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] States, could [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] the citizens who levied war against the United States [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] that the law of force which [illegible] thousands into the armies was a [illegible] that the mass of volunteers had failed [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] those who had rashly precipitated the Gulf States into the revolution. Surely no [illegible] [illegible] intolerance [illegible] [illegible]. No good man asks vengeance that brings to the God who teaches men the majesty of law and the [illegible] of justice. But the [illegible] sentiment of an outraged people should silence the flippancy of those who seek to purchase mercy by an oath without acknowledging that justice might deny that privilege. If they have no sorrow or shame for themselves, let the innocent blood upon a thousand battle fields stand as a witness against the stupendous errors. * * *

The Government of the United States tendered an amnesty, or pardon (there is no use mincing words) to the great masses. To accept it is to acknowledge individual guilt, and the right and power to define offences and to punish. It is also to admit that the State cannot, by its exercise of "sovereignty," afford a plea for justification, and that the Confederate States of America was a grand conspiracy for rebellion. Those excepted out of the proclamation have to sue for pardon as exceptional individual cases. This is not the mere logic of the Constitution which [illegible] the admission that the United States is a Government with rightful civil and criminal jurisdiction. It is to abandon all notions that the States created a mere "agency," and to admit that the people of the United States formed a "more perfect union," and that it was intended to be perpetual, and the redress of grievances must be sought through the appropriate departments of the Government. Let no one then, take the oath in the spirit of signing a mere parole until exchanged, but with the full acknowledgment that he has been misled and brought to grief by false teachers, that he has incurred the penalty of the law as a citizen of the United States, and, with convicted [illegible] understanding, seeks executive clemency. There is no surrender of State rights in all this. Had no man resisted no one of the States would be affected. But the multitude resisted, the magistrates and people renounced their obligations to the Constitution of the United States and swore to support a myth. As judged by the Administration, the State corporation was thus dissolved and the actors in the rebellion became conspirators. We are thus a State without a magistracy who acknowledge the paramount law, a people with an organic [illegible] or [illegible] voted for by three fourths, which denies all connection with the United States. To take the oath recants the vote and repudiates the ordinance. It restores citizenship. Let no one palter with his conscience or perjure himself. Let him rather depart to some country where the crown is the sovereignty.

Danger of Military Usurpation.—Among the innumerable dangers which have threatened this country in the eyes of foreign writers was the danger from ambitious Generals. If our officers succeed in this war, they were not only going to clamor for other wars, but were sure to overthrow the public liberties and proclaim themselves the masters of the nation.

Now that the war is successfully closed, what are the prospects of this? Why Grant had hardly got Lee routed before he hastened to Washington, and prepares for the disbandment of the army, which has been going on ever since. Sherman, on his part, delivered an address descanting on the glories of peace, and urging them all to return to their former civil occupations, and his example has been followed by other officers of eminence.

Of those Generals who have left the army some have gone into gold mining or the oil business, some into law or the grocery business, some into cotton speculation, others into raising corn and cabbage; several have become newspaper editors; some have gone into politics, and we hear of one as a candidate for Governor of a State; others are preparing to run for Congress or the Legislature or the Common Council.

In short, the ambitious Generals, whom we were told to dread, are rapidly being resolved into the great body of American citizens, taking their part in the active duties of peaceful life and doing their share to the defense of the public liberties.—N. Y. Times.

The Story About Mrs. Surratt's Spiritual Advisers.—The statement of a prominent counsel engaged in the late conspiracy trial, which was telegraphed from Washington and got into print, to the effect that spiritual attendants were denied admission to Mrs. Surratt on the day of the execution, unless Secretary Stanton had received from them (the spiritual attendants) a promise that they would not on the scaffold proclaim their belief in Mrs. Surratt's innocence, is denounced as utterly unfounded in truth. A Washington dispatch says it appears from the official return or report of Gen. Hartranft to Gen. Hancock that immediately after the findings and sentences of the military commission were read to the condemned, Mrs. Surratt requested that her spiritual advisers be sent for, and Gen. Hartranft without a moment's delay forwarded the request and notified the priests to call at the prison, which they did promptly, and were freely, and at such times as they desired, admitted to the cell of Mrs. Surratt, remaining with her uninterruptedly nearly all the time until the execution took place. The priests were not required to consult with Mr. Stanton as to their motives, nor was there any promise exacted from them by any official. In this connection it is also stated that the Catholic priests who attended Mrs. Surratt have made affidavits respecting the restrictions from the War Department, which will be published soon.

A Solomon on the Bench.—A curious incident [illegible] [illegible] criminal [illegible]. A young woman [illegible] less than a year [illegible] was arraigned for having stolen three [illegible] [illegible] from the house of a lady where she had called on business. The prisoner stated in her defense that her baby snatched the coins from a table without her knowledge, and carried them in its hand; that she had [illegible] them there and was preparing to [illegible] with the money when she was arrested. The defense was thought most probable owing to the child's age, but the President, in order to test its possibility, ordered one of the ushers to lay three gold pieces on the ledge of the dock within the baby's reach. The moment the little thing saw the money it clutched the pieces firmly, and attempted to put it in its mouth. This experiment [illegible] the tribunal that the woman had told the truth, and she was acquitted of the charge.

The Missouri Democrat tells a story of a returned female rebel who, on her way from Canada to the States, attempted to smuggle a variety of goods through her hoop skirts. The waggish dealer in clocks, who knew she intended to run the blockade with her purchases, set the alarm so that it would strike just as she was passing through the custom house. The officer had [illegible] [illegible] her when the whirr of the alarm betrayed the whereabouts of the contraband goods and led to its capture.

ALLEN'S LUNG BALSAM!

The Remedy for Curing

CONSUMPTION, COUGHS, COLDS,

Asthma, Croup,

Diseases of the Throat, Bronchitis, Pains and Oppression of the Chest and Lungs, Difficult Breathing and all the Diseases of the Pulmonary Organs.

ITS ACTION IS EXPECTORANT, ALTERATIVE, SUDORIFIC, SEDATIVE, DIAPHORETIC AND DIURETIC, which renders it one of the most valuable remedies known for curing diseases of the lungs. It excites expectoration, and causes the lungs to throw off the phlegm or mucus; CHANGES THE SECRETIONS AND PURIFIES THE BLOOD; heals the irritated parts; gives strength to the digestive organs; brings the liver to its proper action, and imparts strength to the whole system. Such is the immediate and satisfactory effect that it is WARRANTED TO BREAK UP THE MOST DISTRESSING COUGH IN A FEW HOURS TIME, if not of too long standing. IT IS WARRANTED to give entire satisfaction even in the MOST CONFIRMED CASES OF CONSUMPTION. IT IS WARRANTED NOT to produce costiveness (which is the case with most remedies) or affect the head, as it contains no Opium in any form. IT IS WARRANTED TO BE PERFECTLY HARMLESS to the most delicate child, although it is an active and powerful remedy for restoring the system. THERE IS NO REAL NECESSITY FOR SO MANY DEATHS BY CONSUMPTION, when ALLEN'S LUNG BALSAM will prevent it if only taken in time.

Sold by all Druggists. Price $1 per bottle.
